

Giotto's house

It has to be one of the most interesting stops visiting Vicchio. Placed on the charming hill of Vespignano, just below the church of San Martino, it was a modest medieval building and went through several adjustments over the past time, like stone squares panels for the windows and a gothic style entrance. During the earthquake in 1919 the house was heavily damaged as the first floor collapsed. The house was reconstructed only in 1967, once bought by the town of Vicchio. During the reconstruction it was found out that the building was only a part of an older larger residence. Giotto's house, after the latest reorganizations, has become more than a museum offering a wider range of artistic experiences and will live up during the week-end by special events, meetings or school trips.
